

SWITCH AND WHITE FIGHT AGAIN.

Twenty-five Rounds of Clever Boxing at the Bohemian Sporting Club.

CHICAGO MAN FAVORITE.

Offers of $100 to $80 in Tommy's Favor Made at the Ring Side.

REIDY AND HAYES DRAW, TOO.

The Lesser Lights Put Up a Six Round Encounter, After Which It Is Decided That Honors Are Even.

After twenty-five rounds of the hottest kind of fighting the twenty-five-round bout between Solly Smith, of Los Angeles, Cal., and Tommy White, of Chicago, was declared a draw at the Bohemian Sporting Club last night. It was a great fight in a sense, and the admirers of boxing who saw it were well pleased with the exhibition.

The crowd, though numerically larger, lacked the exclusiveness that has heretofore characterized the attendance at the boxing shows of this club, but clearly demonstrated to the management that it is infinitely more profitable to cater to the general public than to be limited to the club members and their friends.

The spectators, numbering about six hundred, were thoroughly cosmopolitan in character and appreciative in disposition, and it was made manifest that boxing is gradually reaching a higher level and gaining a stronger hold as a legitimate sport in this community.

After the preliminary bouts many of the prominent sporting men swarmed into the parlors and reception room of the club house, where, amid the popping of corks and the hum of voices, the market was made and the opening price quoted as 100 to 80 in favor of white. Bets were made freely, and at one time the room resembled one of the betting parlors at the bookmakers' club.

There were to have been two preliminary bouts, but one of the contestants for the semi-preliminary failed to appear, consequently Jerry Reidy and Eddie Hayes, two local 125-pound men, boxed six lively rounds, which was called a draw.

After this little performance had been gone through both principals gathered their forces and equipments of towels, bottles and pads of cracked ice and started for the arena.

Smith led the procession, encased in a figured bath robe, and stepped into the ring at exactly 10 o'clock. In his retinue were McGee, Eddie Deuling and John Kenny. White was but a few seconds behind his opponent, and was dressed in a dark suit. He dropped into his chair, and bowed graciously in recognition of a burst of applause, while Charley White, Jack Eberhardt and Billy Sullivan began to fan him.

The gloves were hastily donned, after which Frank Abraham, the referee, gave Smith and White the usual instructions. The boxers then stood facing each other, and White landed a heavy left hook on the jaw. Solly tried a swinging left, and was very short, and White stepped in and landed a good right-hand body blow as the round ended.

Round 4—Smith swung his right and left on the body, but they did little harm, and White jabbed continually on the face, landing several heavy swings. Solly, toward the close of the round, got in a heavy left on the neck.

Round 7—Smith showed a lively pace and got in two strong ones on body and face and then landed another awfully hard right-hand body blow. White ducked and ducked away from two rights. Both then countered. White on the wind and Smith on the body, and White landed a good right that would have ended the contest had it landed. Toward the end of the round they both did some very fast work, with honors even, that drew a round of applause from the spectators.

Round 8—At the close of the eighth round Smith landed on the forehead and White faltered, but gathered himself, shooting his left in his left eye, and swinging his right. Solly's both hands got home on the head at the going time. It was easily Smith's round.

Round 9—Solly tried with his right and was nailed on the jaw. Smith's left got on the forehead twice, sending the head back. The white came with his hardest blow, left on the mouth, causing Smith to grunt and rush with both hands. White's cleverness saved him a number of times and he succeeded in getting home three very good lefts on the head.

Round 10—This round opened very fast, both sending in hard. Solly got close and nailed White's nose, drawing a tiny stream of blood, while the latter punched the wind very hard. They were at it again, and when the going sound was heard they had to be ordered to their corners.

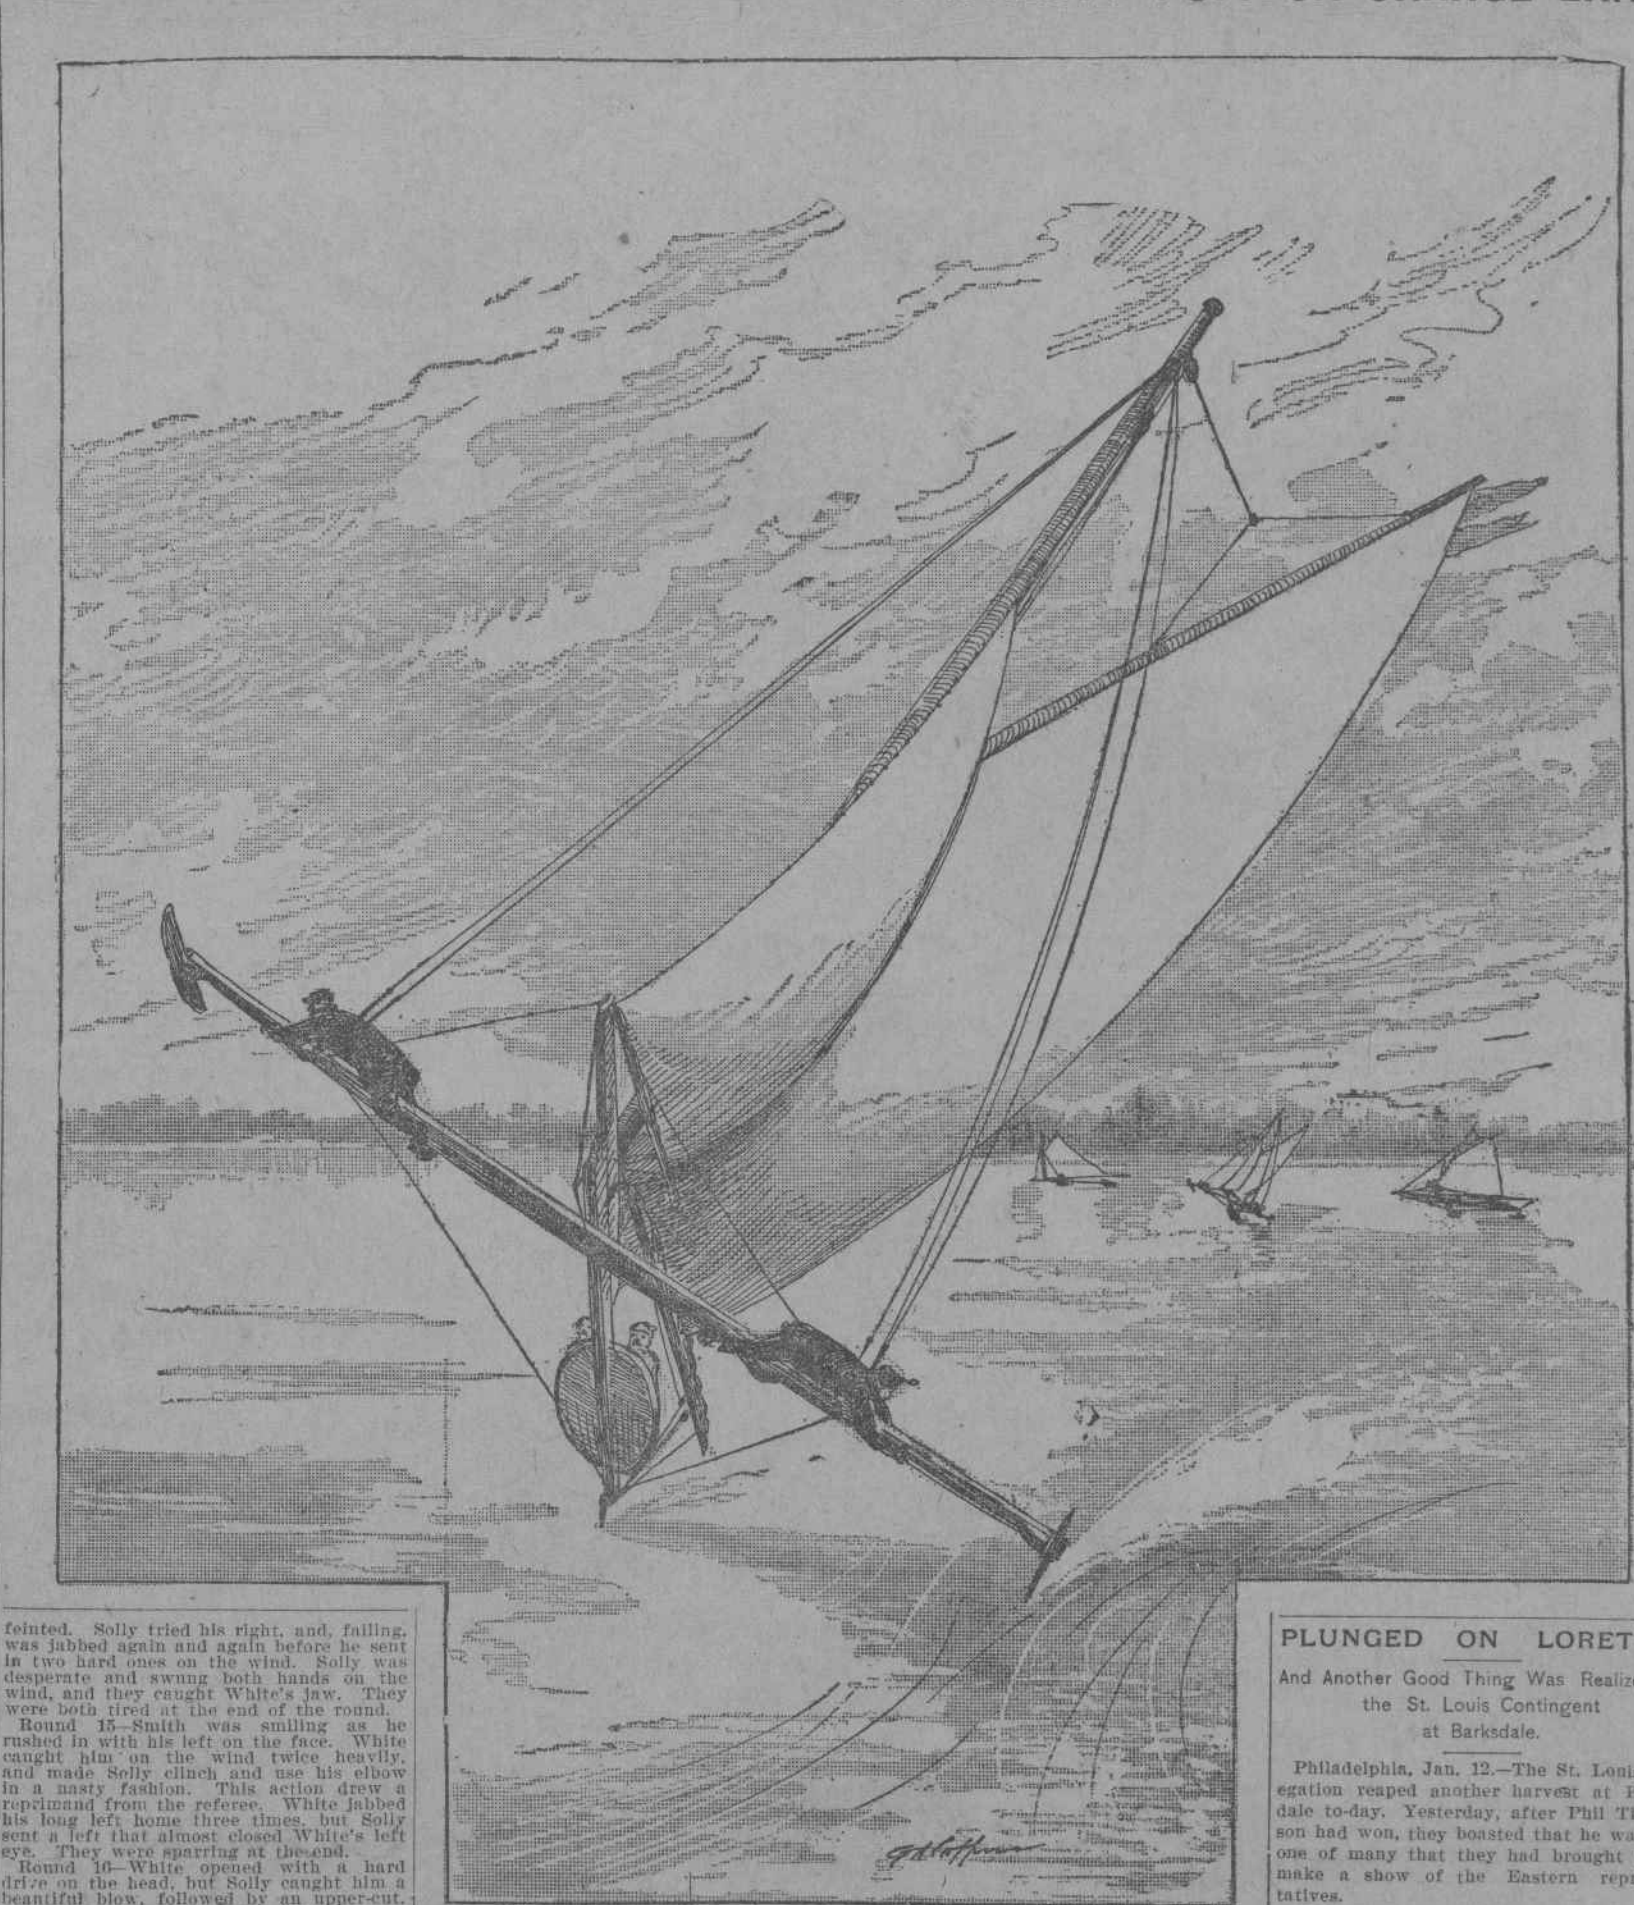

Round 11—Solly sent a left to White's nose and the Chicago man's head, while the latter reached the mouth. Four times White landed with both hands without a return. Solly shaped himself to get home his famous right, but the Chicago man's head and both did great work. Smith seemed to be the stronger at the end of this round, while White's face was showing the visitation of his opponent's gloves.

Round 12—Smith began by jolting White with his left, and then rushing across the ring front of two slashing lefts. White got out of a dangerous place cleverly, and sent in two good lefts on the lips, only to be repaid with a right-hand body blow, that had an awful sound. They got to close work, where Smith was the aggressor, and got in a number of good, hard punches.

Round 13—Both came left hands, and then Smith tilted White's head back three times, but the Chicago boy got very fast, landing both right and left on Smith's jaw and nose, bringing a torrent of blood from the nose. Two lefts on Smith's jaw made him stagger, and White sailed in, landing fast and hard on the Los Angeles boy's head.

Round 14—White was very cool and

PLUNGED ON LORETTA.

And Another Good Thing Was Realized by the St. Louis Contingent at Barksdale.

Philadelphia, Jan. 12.—The St. Louis delegation resented another harvest at Barksdale today. Yesterday, after Phil Thompson had won a hundred yards race, the St. Louis contingent had won a hundred yards race, but one of many that they had brought on to make a show of the Eastern representatives.

Their confidence in Loretta today enabled them to win a lot of money, for the wires to out-of-town poolrooms were kept busy with orders for commissions to be placed, and at the track they played it down from 2 to 1 to 2 to 5, the bulk of the money going on at 4 to 5 and less.

The feature of the afternoon was the showing of Bartone II. He was asked to carry 120 pounds against a fair lot of sprinters, who were all in light, and few believed him capable of making the concessions. There was a delay of twenty minutes at the post, and when the word finally came he was in the rear division of a badly strung out field. On the far turn he worked clear, and Ellis set out to catch the leaders. The task looked a hopeless one, but he persevered, and in the very last jump got up and won by a head.

The Blue Piece matter has finally been disposed of. W. Dunlap, who trained her here, has been ordered to produce her for trial. This preliminary means banishment, as the mare was shipped away on Sunday.
